This was the general opinion of the group of women who visited the Sedalia City jail Wednesday afternoon. In the foreground are Mrs.

City Jail Tour Results In Criticism by Women

By RALPH JONES
Democrat-Capitol Staff Writer

The inconvenience encountered in transporting prisoners from the Sedalia police station to the Pettis County jail after booking, then the same inconvenience in transporting the prisoner back to city hall for trial, was given by Police Chief Bill Miller as his main objection to the operation of a combined Sedalia-Pettis County jail.

Miller gave this answer to a direct question asked by Mrs. Donald Barnes during a visit of Church Women United members and members of other women's organizations at the city jail and city hall Wednesday afternoon.

Miller explained to the women that several times daily, prisoners are booked for investigation and then taken to the jail and held until the investigation is completed. Often they are released without formal charge, which makes it necessary to have the jail inside of the city hall building, or nearby, in order to have proper supervision without the inconvenience of having to transport prisoners several blocks, he said.

The group of women represented several churches and some were affiliated with CWU and some not. They made the visit carrying placards proclaiming their displeasure at having such "deplorable" facilities as the city jail to house prisoners, even for a little while. The cards read, "Down With 19th Century Plumbing," "Let's Vote Yes," "Concern," and other promotional slogans.

Churches represented included Broadway Presbyterian, United Church of Christ, First United Methodist, Epworth United Methodist, Ward Memorial Baptist, St. Patrick's Church and Sacred Heart. A civic club, BPWC, was also represented.

The group was first taken through the jail, then to the council chambers, the mayor's office and to other rooms in city hall. At each point they expressed amazement at the fact that the bond issue last year for a new city hall was defeated. Their placards indicated their desire to promote and approve another bond issue in the near future.

Mrs. Barnes, who heads the CWU group, said, "I feel that we are on the right track, being concerned about a new jail. It does honestly disappoint me that we can't fire up more enthusiasm for this type of thing."

Another visitor commented, "We are generally amazed at the condition of the jail. I wish more of the women could have seen it for that reason."

Miller said the building is about 90 years old as far as can be determined. He said the plumbing was once discarded by the penal institution in Jefferson City, then given to Sedalia to install in the city jail. He also explained the procedures in handling prisoners, including the fact the jail has no juvenile facilities or facilities for detaining women prisoners separately.

The women indicated they will attend the next city council meeting to see if there is anything that can be done immediately about the jail situation.

Support for Flat Creek Work

The Flat Creek rural recreation center project, under debate for funding for several years, this week received support from Senator Thomas F. Eagleton at a hearing before the Public Works subcommittee in Washington.

The Flat Creek project, according to reports, would include a reservoir from which the city could, if it wished, supplement its water supply. Also under consideration were conservation and flood control, with recreational facilities as a secondary possibility.

Also gaining support for "proper funding" from Eagleton were the Chariton-Little Chariton project;

Clearwater Reservoir; Long Branch Reservoir; Platte River project; Smithville Reservoir; Stockton Reservoir; Nodaway River project; Wears Creek project; Missouri River channel improvement and Fishing River tributaries project.

Eagleton's support for those projects was voiced after he introduced to the subcommittee a number of witnesses representing the Mo-Ark Flood Control and Conservation Association and the Missouri Valley Association.

"There are five problem areas to which I would direct your attention and for which we need your special consideration this year," Eagleton told members of the subcommittee. One of those problem areas was the Kaysinger Bluff Reservoir. "Progress on... the Reservoir continues to be very slow," he said.

"The Corps of Engineers has a fiscal... capability for the Kaysinger Bluff Reservoir of $14,000,000," Eagleton said. "I would hope that favorable consideration could be given to funding the full capability of the Corps..."

Eagleton also said that the revised cost estimate for the Kaysinger project was $213,000,000 with a scheduled completion date in 1977. "However, with continuing increases in costs and minimal funding, the total cost will climb sharply and the completion date will be many years away," he said.

Eagleton stressed that the "project has effects on numerous communities in western Missouri. The citizens of these communities and the area included in the project continue to be adversely affected by delays in progress," he said to committee members.

Other problem areas outlined by Eagleton were the Grand River Basin project; Missouri River Agricultural Levee project; Little Blue River project; and Cannon Dam and Reservoir in northeast Missouri.

Prepare For Tax Battle

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The lines were drawn today in the last ditch effort to find a compromise for the key revenue bill to increase income tax levies.

House Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, named five strong supporters of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' tax program to face the Senate's equally strong opponents. The new conference committee was expected to meet later today.

The stubbornness expected from both sides, however, did not indicate any early success. Godfrey selected majority leader Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis; Speaker Pro Tem Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann.; Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Hannibal; Rep. Buddy Kay, D-St. Louis, and Rep. Corley Thompson, R-Clayton.

Senate President Pro Tem Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, severe senate critic of the Hearnes' tax program, named himself and these others to represent the senate in the conference committee effort to reach a compromise.

Sens. Edward T. Linehan, D-St. Louis; Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann.; John A. Johnson, D-Affton, and Richard M. Webster, R-Carthage.

The Senate has repeatedly followed Blackwell's lead and rejected a House-approved bill that would increase individual income taxes. It went along with part of the bill to increase corporate income taxes adding an extra 1 per cent to it, in fact. That brought the corporate total to 5 per cent from its present 2 per cent rate.

Conclude Home Rule Reports

The Sedalia Home Rule Commission accepted the final committee report Wednesday night in its seven-month effort to draw up a proposed city charter.

With the acceptance of the amended finance department report, after several tries for approval, the path was cleared for framing the proposed charter in legal terminology.

Neil Chapman, chairman of the commission, said the rough drafts of the charter are to be turned over to attorney Earl Crawford. Chapman said the commission hopes to have its first consultation with Crawford at the next regular meeting, June 25.

Following the approval of the finance department report, considered the most important of the 19 reports since it deals with taxation, the commission made preliminary plans to establish steering and publicity committees and line up speakers to appear before various local organizations.

The educational program is part of the final step to inform Sedalians of the provisions of the charter before a vote is taken. The election must come before Nov. 5, it was reported.

Final Deadline For City Sticker

The final deadline to purchase city license stickers will be 12 noon Saturday. According to Mrs. Frank Hugelmann, city collector, license sales for cars have reached 6,250; trucks, 471; and motorcycles, 127. Money-wise, sales have topped last year. However, merchant license sales are down, she said.

Tax Extension Plan Gains in Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively agreed today on extension of the income surtax coupled with a special allowance that would take two million low income families off the tax rolls entirely.

The proposal will be voted on formally Monday. Acting Chairman Hale Boggs, D-La., told newsmen. This would permit House action next week.

Boggs' announcement, at the Capitol, followed a White House meeting of House leaders with President Nixon and others.

Following that meeting, a White House spokesman said Nixon received unanimous support from Democratic and Republican House leaders for his proposed 12-month extension of the surcharge.

It said he was given an expression of confidence that it would be approved by the House.

"I think the House will pass it," Boggs said.

The low income allowance, a Treasury proposal, would consist of a special $1,100 deduction allowed persons generally at or below the poverty level. Above this level, the allowance would scale down and drop off.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Charles Walker said that in all about 13 million persons would benefit from it.

The provision for low income taxpayers would cost the Treasury about $660 million a year in revenues, he said.

The package the Ways and Means Committee ordered put together for its vote Monday includes:

Extension of the 10 per cent surtax through Dec. 31 and then for six months at 5 per cent, as Nixon proposed.

The low income allowance.

Repeal of the investment credit by which businesses can recoup 7 per cent of their investment in equipment, Boggs said, however, there may be some modification of this provision. Members have been pressing for continuing some investment credit for small businesses and other special cases.

Postponement for a year of the scheduled drop in telephone and automobile excise taxes.

The account of the White House gathering came from presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

Nixon called the bipartisan leadership into an unusual White House meeting this morning with Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy and other top economic advisers in his

New Negotiations Team In Paris for Viet Cong

PARIS (AP) — The Viet Cong's new provisional revolutionary government of South Vietnam replaced the National Liberation Front at the Paris peace talks today without objection from the United States or the Saigon government. The faces were the same.

The change-over took place at the 21st full-scale meeting of the talks when the foreign minister of the newly established government, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, took her seat and formally notified the other parties of the transfer of functions.

After announcing the change, she made this statement: "Today at this session our delegation... solemnly declares its will to continue negotiations with the other parties of the conference."

South Vietnamese delegate Pham Dang Lam ignored the switch completely in his prepared statement, but he circulated a statement outside the meeting declaring his government's nonrecognition of the new government. He said the change would not alter the nature of the talks.

Ambassador Lawrence E. Walsh, sitting for the United States in the absence of Henry Cabot Lodge, preceded his main speech with a supplementary statement on the change.

"From the beginning of the Paris meeting on Vietnam," Walsh said, "the United States has looked on these meetings as meetings between two sides. We have recognized that each side may organize itself as it chooses. We continue to regard these meetings as two-sided."

"As far as we are concerned, the spokesmen for your side have introduced changes in name only. We place no significance on the manner in which you choose to style yourselves. Such changes in no way affect the conduct of our business at these meetings."

"Whatever you do for self-serving propaganda does not change the reality of the political and military situation in South Vietnam. Nor does it change the basis upon which these negotiations at the Paris meetings should seek to achieve a peaceful settlement of the war in Vietnam. In this regard we will continue to present constructive proposals for peace in the same spirit which has guided us in the past."

Walsh devoted a substantial part of his main statement to a review of the U.S.-South Vietnamese summit meeting on Midway Island last Sunday.

John Lewis, CIO's Organizer, Is Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis, the unsmiling, bush-browed labor leader who defied presidents and the titans of industry to better the lot of America's working men, is dead.

The 89-year-old former leader of half-million coal miners and founder of the CIO, died Wednesday night at Doctors Hospital, where he had been admitted Sunday night suffering from internal bleeding.

His last words to a reporter—five years ago—was "Organize" the same language he used in leading the United Mine Workers Union and founding the CIO.

Harry Bridges, another labor figure and boss of the longshoreman's union, said about Lewis: "He wrote history in words, deeds and action. I've never seen his equal yet, and I don't expect to live long enough to do so."

Lewis could be mean. As a youth in the mines he was kicked by a mule. He brained the mule with a "sprang," the wooden break-lever of a coal car. In 1935 he decked an AFL leader at a union convention with one punch.

But the leader of the United Mine Workers for 40 years and moving force in the drive to organize the nation's unskilled workers could also be eloquent and ironic.

In 1949 he told a Senate committee on mine safety that 1,259,081 miners had been killed in the mines since 1930. To ram this home, he said:

"If I had the powers of a Merlin, I would march that million and a quarter men past the Congress of the United States—the quick and the dead."

"I would have the ambulatory injured drag the dead after them... trailing their bowels."

"I would have the concourse flanked by five weeping members of each man's family, six and a quarter-million people, wailing and lamenting."

When President Franklin Delano Roosevelt refused to sup-

Lifesaving, Swimming Dates Set

Red Cross junior and senior lifesaving and swimming classes will begin June 16 at Liberty Park Pool, according to Mrs. C. Kay Johnson, chairman of Red Cross water safety, and the local Red Cross office.

Lifesaving classes will be held June 16-27, from 5 to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday. Instructors will be Mrs. Uhr and Mary Viets for juniors, and Marsha Edging and Mrs. Johnson will instruct seniors.

Swimming classes will run June 16-27, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., with Mrs. Johnson in charge. Water safety instructors this year will be Marsha Edging, Susan Fechtel, Betty Anne Hogan, Dana Routsong, Sue Uhr, Mary Viets, and Mrs. Johnson. Aides will be Debbie Lyles, Mickey McGrath and Martin Hogan.

The second period of swimming classes will be July 14-25. At that time classes for retarded children will be held.

Prospective students may enroll in advance at the Red Cross office, 112 West Fourth, or by calling 827-0618.

Take Bids For Use Of Government Land

The Kansas City District office of the Corps of Engineers has invited any interested person to submit a bid on leasing five parcels of land on the Whiteman AFB property for grazing purposes.

Additional information can be obtained at the office of the Base Civil Engineer at Whiteman. The bids are to be opened June 26 at the Federal Building in Kansas City.

Ryan Is Confident About Fair's Funds

Sen. John Ryan of Sedalia told The Sedalia Democrat Thursday he had heard no opposition from either members of the Missouri House or the Senate to the annual week-long State Fair here.

Ryan said, "There is no reason for us not to have a fair and I think that all the statements made about not having it are erroneous."

Ryan said he had talked to members of the appropriations committee and that they had "given me assurance they would release all funds necessary to have the fair this year."

The senator also said he had discussed his findings with Secretary of Agriculture Dexter Davis.

Ryan said, "If Mr. Davis would sit down with the appropriations committee I'm sure they would give him full support. That's what they intended to do."

Ryan indicated that the general feeling at the state capitol was favorable to the fair.

"I found no sentiment whatsoever of opposition to the fair," Ryan said. "I have talked to both House and Senate members and no one suggested that we not have a fair."

The possibility that there might not be a fair this year was first raised when the Senate appropriations committee reduced the operating budget of the fair.

At this time, both Davis and Wilbert Askew, secretary-manager of the fair, expressed concern over the future of the fair.

Since then, several appeals have been made in the senate for restoration of the funds since Davis said he felt the fair could not be operated under the expenditures allowed.

Ryan has consistently expressed the opinion that there was no valid reason for not holding the fair this year.

Ryan said Thursday that he would continue to work to assure receipt of the money needed to hold the fair.

Patrol's Ordeal Is Finally Over

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Marine patrol clashed with North Vietnamese troops inside the demilitarized zone, then carried some of its wounded over mountains and through jungles for two days to safety, U.S. headquarters announced today.

Two Marine helicopters were shot down and destroyed as they tried to rescue the patrol of a dozen or more men. All of the helicopter crewmen escaped unhurt, and joined the patrol.

It was the first ground clash reported in the DMZ in nearly three months, and a U.S. spokesman said the two choppers were the first shot down over the zone since the halt in the bombing of North Vietnam Nov. 1.

The action began last Saturday near the western end of the DMZ and the last Marines finally made it back Wednesday. Through it all, only seven Leathernecks were wounded, four of them were hit accidentally by fire from an Air Force gunship that was covering the patrol's withdrawal.

The patrol ran into about 35 North Vietnamese troops Saturday morning while on a reconnaissance mission about a mile inside the southern half of the DMZ and nine miles northwest of the Marine base known as The Rockpile.

The Americans and the North Vietnamese exchanged machine-gun and small-arms fire. As the fighting continued, Marine reinforcements were flown up by helicopter and joined in the shooting.

U.S. headquarters said three Marines were wounded in this clash while North Vietnamese losses were not known.

Five hours after the initial contact, a Marine CH46 helicopter trying to lift out the ground troops was hit by machine-gun fire and crashed. The chopper was destroyed and its three or four crewmen were uninjured and joined the Marines on the ground.

Two hours later, another CH46 was hit by anti-aircraft fire, crashed and its uninjured crewmen joined the ground force.

American artillery below the DMZ opened up on the North Vietnamese guns that shot down the two helicopters.

Plan Falls Short of Its Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Self-policing moves by the U.S. Judicial Conference have failed to halt plans for legislative action to prevent conflicts of interest involving federal judges.

Two Senate Judiciary subcommittees intend to go ahead with hearings, and the Senate Rules Committee is being asked to schedule hearings on a financial disclosure bill.

The request to the Rules Committee was made by Sens. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., and Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., chief sponsors of a measure to require public reports annually on outside sources of income by all federal officials earning more than $18,000 a year.

The bill would apply to judges, members of Congress, and executive branch officials.

The Judicial Conference, at a meeting here Tuesday, adopted a resolution requiring all federal judges except members of the Supreme Court to file annual statements with the conference listing their income, assets and liabilities.

A spokesman for Case said he did not feel this was adequate since public disclosure is not required. Case has maintained this is vital if it is to be effective.

Case was joined by Hart in sending a letter to Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., chairman of the Rules Committee, urging hearings on their full disclosure bill.

People In The News

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon now has a perfect record as a Washington Senators fan—he's seen them play twice and they've lost both ball games.

Returning from his Midway conference Tuesday the President remarked that the home team had been winning lately, that he would go out and see them when he found the time, "and I hope I'm not bad luck for them."

Nixon went to the ball game Wednesday night and stayed to the bitter end as the Senators struggled to a 13-inning defeat at the hands of Oakland, 6-4.

The President threw out the first ball at the Senators' opening game April 7. They lost that one to the New York Yankees, 8-4.

PARIS (AP) — Georges Pompidou still holds a good lead over Alain Pöher in the latest voter poll on the race for president of France. But he has lost a little ground.

The poll by the French Institute of Public Opinion, published Wednesday, gave Pompidou 55 per cent to Pöher's 45. In a poll published last week it was Pompidou 57 per cent, Pöher 43.

The election will be held Sunday.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Elois Maitre, chief of President Francois Duvalier's secret police, has been fired.

Announcing this Wednesday, official sources described the dismissal as nonpolitical, but gave no reason for it.

However, it came only a few days after a plane hired by Haitian exiles dropped fire bombs on the capital last week.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — President Suharto has denied a request from the second wife of his predecessor, ousted President Sukarno, for permission to help nurse Sukarno through a bout of rheumatism.

The wife, Hartini, is under house confinement in Bogor, 40 miles south of here. Sukarno, 68, is under guard in the mansion of his fourth wife, Ratna Sari Dewi, in Jakarta.

Disclosing Wednesday that Hartini's request to join Sukarno had been rejected, Suharto's special assistant, Brig. Gen. Ali Murpoto, told newsmen: "It would only cause trouble."

DA NANG, South Vietnam (AP) — Actor James Stewart's stepson, Marine 1st Lt. Ronald W. McLean, has been killed in combat.

A military spokesman said Wednesday McLean, 24, died with a bullet in his chest Sunday while leading a reconnaissance patrol along the southern edge of the demilitarized zone.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., chairman of a Judiciary subcommittee on separation of powers announced hearings will be held in the next few weeks on what outside activities federal judges may properly perform.

He said in a statement the hearings were not intended to rehash recent controversies surrounding individual justices. This apparently was a reference not only to Fortas but to Justice William O. Douglas, who recently severed his ties with the Albert Parvin Foundation from which he was receiving $12,000 a year.

"We seek to formulate principles which can guide both the public and the federal bench in the future," Ervin said. "We are not interested in personalities."

Another Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D-Md., also plans to continue hearings on a judicial reform bill Tydings has introduced. It includes a limited form of financial disclosure and also provides for a commission that could enforce the regulations adopted by the Judicial Conference.

'Spies' in Space Death for MOL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Aerospace industry sources say major breakthroughs in the art of spying by satellite may have shot down the Air Force plan for men to live in orbit a month at a time.

Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard indicated as much when he announced cancellation of the manned orbiting laboratory (MOL) program.

Packard said the decision was based in part on "advances in automated techniques for unmanned satellite systems in such fields as research, communications, navigation and meteorology."

The key word, industry sources believe, was "research." Under this broad heading falls development of surveillance techniques designed to make sure no nation can fire a missile, test nuclear weapons, move troops or ply the oceans without the U.S. government knowing about it in time to take defensive action if necessary.

Trade and technical reports in recent months indicate the United States has perfected this arsenal of sky spies.

—IS (integrated satellite): First launched last August, this most sophisticated of U.S. military spacecraft may well be the one that doomed MOL. It carries not only the high-resolution still and television cameras of the advanced Samos series but also instruments sensitive to invisible radiations in the electromagnetic spectrum including infrared.

—Ferret: These "electronic intelligence" craft monitor Soviet, Chinese and other radio and radar installations, picking up secret communications. They reportedly have been able to turn on ground-based transmitters of other countries, normally switched off while they are passing overhead, and thus gain information they would have missed.

—770: Fitted with a radar antenna running the 40-foot length of the satellite (an Agena upper stage which goes into orbit), this vehicle can "see" ahead and to either side, mapping wide areas of terrain. It works well even in bad weather because radar microwaves penetrate clouds opaque to light.

—920: Formerly called Samos, this craft carries cameras which from orbits 100 to 150 miles high can identify units in a column of troops, even distinguish the make and model of cars on a street.

—823: Formerly known as Vela, this vehicle has instruments sensitive to ultraviolet and X rays given off by nuclear explosions.

—Midas: Carrying delicate infrared, or heat, sensors, it can detect heat radiation from missile exhausts as a method of early warning and penetrate camouflage to detect truck and tank engines long after they have stopped running.

Most of these unmanned spy-craft are launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base 150 miles north of Los Angeles. They can go either into polar orbit, from which they scan the face of the earth revolving below, or into stationary orbit

North, South to Test Strength

EDITOR'S NOTE—Letting South Vietnamese troops take over the brunt of battle from American forces has become a key element of U.S. policy. The fighting in one contested area has already been assumed experimentally by Saigon forces, ahead of plans to withdraw 25,000 Americans from South Vietnam shortly. An AP reporter who spent several days with Vietnamese units reports on their performance.

By PETER ARNETT
Associated Press Writer

DAK TO, Vietnam (AP) — The first real test battle of the war between South Vietnamese and North Vietnamese troops is developing amidst the dripping, triple-canopied jungles of Dak To.

Each side has put a division into the fight. They have battled for a month. Casualties have been extensive on both sides.

The outcome may indicate the future outcome of a war in which fewer Americans participate, but as the battle entered its second month there were few signposts to the future.

The verdict so far by those on the scene: a draw.

Dak To is a tough proving ground for the South Vietnamese. In this northern corner of the central highlands a series of 1967 battles killed more than 500 U.S. paratroopers and infantrymen. Then it became obvious in 1968 that the Dak To actions were but ploy by the Communist command to suck Americans away from the population centers and into the rugged mountains where the North Vietnamese troops were more on a man-for-man footing.

Some observers believe the Communist command has the same thing on its mind now, and that by continuing to apply pressure it will again force American units to fight among Dak To's mountains.

The Vietnamese are determined to hold on.

"This is my AO (area of operations)," commented Col. Nguyen Ba Lien, operational commander. "I think I can handle it. When we can't do it, then I will call for help."

Help is nearby. A brigade of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division is poised near the province capital of Kontum.

The Dak To region extends north from Kontum into the tri-border region of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. No enemy threat was visible when the Vietnamese took over in April. The U.S. 4th Division was handling the two North Vietnamese regiments in the region.

Then early in May the North Vietnamese shifted a new infantry regiment, the 28th, across from Laos. An artillery regiment, the 40th, soon followed, and a second infantry regiment, the 66th, moved north.

The South Vietnamese poured more and more troops into the fight, including two battalions from the 47th Regiment flown in from the populated coastal plains.

By this week 220 South Vietnamese troops had been killed, 1,100 wounded. An estimated 40 Americans had died defending the artillery and engineer positions still controlled by the United States.

The Vietnamese claimed more than 1,400 North Vietnamese troops had been killed.

An American operations officer commented, "I hope this doesn't keep up much longer. It is costing too much in casualties."

He was asked, "For what side?"

"Both sides," he answered.

The Dak To terrain has monsoon-soaked mud banks, tangled jungles and thorny "wait-a-minute" vines that catch the clothing. It is difficult enough to patrol even when the enemy is absent.

By the time the South Vietnamese entered the fight early in May the battlefield had been prepared by the other side. Enemy foxholes and bunkers were constructed along the hills, communications wire was strung out along the valleys.

The 11th Vietnamese Ranger Battalion was pinned down by fire one whole day late in the month and completely surrounded the next day. It survived only by valiantly fighting its way through the enemy at night.

leaving 57 of its men dead, more wounded, and 20 missing. The rangers claimed they killed more than 200.

"We have whipped the NVA (North Vietnamese army)," exulted one American adviser after the battle. "We have defeated them."

Yet even as he spoke a group of U.S. Army engineers from the 299th Battalion, opening the 10 mile road from Dak To base camp to the Special Forces camp of Ben Het, were hit by North Vietnamese ambushers. That sent their South Vietnamese escorts running and left the Americans to fend for themselves until other Americans could arrive to drive off the attackers.

Despite this setback, the American advisers with the Vietnamese are generally satisfied with their performance. "They have stood off a force that is stronger, and while we have our problems, the other side has problems too," commented Col. Alexander M. Weyand, senior U.S. adviser to the Vietnamese in the area.

Some of these problems include the grinding nature of the battle that quickly wears down the little Vietnamese troops. Usually, Vietnamese units are taken out of hill fights after five or six days to keep up their morale and to refit them.

"I would like the Vietnamese to go down into the valleys more, that's where Charlie is," commented one U.S. adviser. But it is in the valleys where the Vietnamese have been taking their heavy casualties. They prefer the higher ground.

In recent days Vietnamese units found themselves at the mercy of enemy mortar and rocket fire as they beat through the tangled shrubbery. "They are nickel and diming us to death," a U.S. captain adviser said as a score of casualties were evacuated by helicopter.

Soon afterward the Vietnamese were taken from the jungles and redeployed. "There was no point in getting dashed around for nothing," a senior U.S. officer declared.

Fast firepower has been made available to the Vietnamese, as much as that given any American unit.

Lewis

port his bid to organize steel workers, Lewis scowled mightily. "It ill behooves anyone who has been sheltered in labor's house to curse with equal fervor... both labor and its adversaries when they become locked in deadly embrace."

Lewis' contributions to labor were two-fold.

He fused scores of scattered, ineffective miners locals around the nation into a 400,000-member phalanx under his leadership and dealt with miners woes and hopes on an industrywide basis.

This led to their first pensions, their own hospitals, quinquennial wages, and underground travel pay the length of a mine corridor. He once said of his miners, "I am their agent. They pay my salary. They keep me in good clothes. They buy me cigars. I work for them. I expect to continue."

But Lewis moved for power throughout labor, forming the Congress of Industrial Organizations in 1935 and clashing directly with the craft-oriented AFL.

When the AFL thought in terms of craft union of skilled workers like carpenters and plumbers, Lewis was out to organize every worker in the auto, steel, textile, glass and rubber industries into one giant central labor movement.

Attends Convention

Program For 4-H Held Here

Leaders and 4-H members enrolled in Home Improvement projects participated in a one-day educational program at Holiday Inn Thursday.

Representatives from Pettis, Johnson, Henry, Benton, St. Clair and Cooper Counties participated.

It was one of eight such meetings being held throughout Missouri.

The purpose of the event is to provide information which is above and beyond the resources of various communities and to enable 4-H members to become more resourceful and derive greater satisfaction in their projects.

Emphasis was given to good design and the need for an appreciation of superior quality in both new and old furnishings.

Miss Alice Mae Alexander, extension home management specialist, presented the program, assisted by Charline Lindsay, extension youth specialist; both are from the University Extension Division, Columbia.

A panel of area home economists presented a discussion on "Selecting Today's Furnishings and Accessories." They were Mrs. Ruth Reynolds, Clinton; Miss Pauline Lindsay, Osceola; and Miss Opal O'Brian, Sedalia.

A complimentary luncheon was provided by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation.

Following the program and luncheon, and educational tour was made of the home of State Fair Secretary and Mrs. W. C. Aske, Homakers, and Biedermans furniture stores.

Robbery

Detective-Sergeant Perry Franklin and Officer R. D. Guymon of the police department arrived on the scene. The officers began an investigation while Thomas checked to see what was missing.

It was soon determined that 70 men's suits, valued at $5,950, 25 ladies' suits valued at $1,250, 44 men's shirts valued at $264, 40 pairs of men's slacks valued at $600 and 56 ladies' blouses valued at $252 were missing. Total loss was estimated at $8,316.

A considerable amount of remodeling work is being done at the store to combine the former Colonial Shop and the Mall Dress Shop into one store. This accounts for the ladies' clothing available.

Miller based his theory that the participants in the robbery were from out of town on the fact this is the first time this particular method of entry was used.

Several theories as to the whereabouts of the missing clothing and as to the identity of the robbers are being followed as the investigation continues.

Patrol

force began moving south, heading for another site from which they might be lifted out.

"All the while," a U.S. communique said "a U.S. Air Force C47 gunship was providing covering fire for the group as they moved through suspected enemy locations. During the movement, a number of aerial machine-gun rounds from the AC47 ricocheted, wounding four other Marines in the group."

The communique said the Marines continued their reconnaissance mission as they moved through heavy jungles and mountainous terrain Sunday and Monday. A second patrol joined them Monday the seven wounded men were evacuated by helicopter Tuesday.

Magistrate Court

A preliminary hearing for Robert Joe Ross, charged with stealing tires from the Tempo Store in the Thompson Hills Shopping Center, was held in Magistrate Court Thursday morning. The theft allegedly occurred May 20.

After the hearing Judge Frank Armstrong bound the case over to Circuit Court for trial. Ross is free on $5,000 bond. Sam P. Harlan is his attorney.

The case of James Mitchell, 18, 1604 East 11th, charged with common assault in connection with an alleged spitting incident following a preliminary hearing on a drug case May 27, has been transferred from Magistrate Court to Circuit on a change of venue. The case was scheduled for trial in Magistrate Court Thursday, but William F. Brown, attorney for the defense, requested the change of venue.

Arnold M. Dreyer, Kansas City, an agent of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, and Mrs. Donald Bailey, a chemist from the Food and Drug Administration, who lives in Overland Park, Kan., were in Sedalia Thursday prepared to testify in the Mitchell case.

Noon Optimists Hear MPSC Sales Manager

Gene Rhodes, Raytown, industrial sales manager for the Missouri Public Service Co., was the speaker at Optimist Club Tuesday noon at the State Fair Restaurant.

Rhodes told of the new 400,000 kilowatt generator being constructed at Silsby near Ft. Osage for the purpose of providing greater service for the growing industrial area that includes Sedalia. Olin Mathieson, he said, was one of the reasons for the decision to expand. The decision for expansion was made in 1964, Rhodes said, and the generator was on the line June 1 of this year.

This generator brings quite an increase in voltage, Rhodes stated, it has doubled the voltage. It is really larger than the present need to provide for further growth.

Rhodes told of the stack or chimney, which is 700 feet tall and is built of cement, the cement poured around a spider of metal and is believed to be the tallest structure, except for television stations, west of the Mississippi.

Coal, mined in Oklahoma, is brought in the companies' own railroad cars to be used to fire the boiler, and the water used must be very pure. The control panel, Rhodes remarked, is automatic with lights showing on the panel if and where there is any trouble. The men who service the panel are highly skilled in this work, starting with an apprenticeship.

The speaker, who was introduced by Clinton Black, program chairman, showed slides of the generator plant.

Organizational Meet for Parents

A special Head Start parent organizational meeting will be held at 7:14 o'clock tonight at Hubbard School. According to Head Start Director Jack Jones, the purpose of the meeting, in addition to complying with OEO guidelines, is to organize Head Start parents into an effective unit to assist with the Head Start program and to assume roles in making decisions that affect their children.

Jones also said that 80 children had been enrolled. Volunteers and children's clothes are still needed by the program.

Mrs. Church, educator from Warrensburg, will conduct the educational training classes for volunteers.

Battles Addresses Optimists

Richard M. Battles, consultant on drinking problems for Sedalia and Pettis County, was the speaker at the Sunrise Optimist Club meeting at 7 a.m. Tuesday at State Fair Restaurant.

Battles explained that he is a liaison between the problem drinker and the doctor, psychiatrist, Alcoholic Anonymous, hospital, judge, and law enforcement officer.

Alcoholism, Battles stressed, is a definite physical and social disease. The warden at the Missouri State Penitentiary, he told the group, said that 75 per cent of the inmates were there directly or indirectly because of alcohol; and 60 per cent of people in state hospitals are there because of drinking.

Liquor is the cause of 50 per cent of the automobile accidents, Battles said.

The most important thing for an alcoholic trying to quit drinking is self confidence and self help, Battles said; he has to want to quit.

The meeting was presided over by Wes Raines with invocation by the Rev. Marvin Nobles.

Nelson Nix, president-elect, gave a report of the Babe Ruth team sponsored by the club. Nix is manager of the team and Wayne Tinseth is coach.

Harry Young, Sr., had as his guest Dr. Ron Schuler.

Lady Bugs Reelect Mrs. Evron Campbell

Mrs. Evron Campbell, Sedalia, was re-elected Royal Lady Gold Bug (president) of the Royal Circle of Missouri, Military Order of Lady Bugs, at the 22nd Annual Hunt held Saturday, June 7, at Bothwell Hotel.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. Mary Harvey, Lady Katydid; Mrs. Wilma Kile, North Kansas City, Lady Butterfly; Mrs. Doris Petershagen, Lady Firefly; Mrs. Rosa Lee Prymus, Lady Sharp Claws; Mrs. Elsie Kearney, Joplin, Lady Book Worm; Mrs. Vera Clark, St. Joseph, official Greedy; Mrs. Dorothy Worthen, St. Joseph, No. 3 and Mrs. Frances Feine, Jefferson City, No. 2, official Buttniki.

The hunt started at 9 a.m. with registration and the business continued through the day.

A memorial service was held for two members who have died during the past year, Mrs. Pauline Blatterman and Mrs. Myrtle Smith, and one man, whose wife is a member, Potts Evans.

A smorgasbord banquet was served at 6:30 p.m.

Mrs. Campbell, following the banquet, presented citations for the voluntary work done in veterans hospitals during the year 1968-69, to Mrs. Wilma Kile, 1,750 hours; Mrs. Rosa Lee Prymus, 1,000 hours; Charles Crittenden, 300 hours; Bettye Crittenden, 300 hours; Mrs. Lorraine LaFlora, 300 hours and Mrs. Idella LaJeunesse, 140 hours. The work in veterans' hospitals is the purpose of the organization.

Mrs. Sue Caldwell, Clinton, Circle No. 4, brought in the most new members during the year; and Circle No. 13, Independence had the most new and re-instated members in the Royal Circle.

A beautiful arrangement of red carnations was presented to Mrs. Lula McGraw, Sedalia, oldest Lady Bug in the United States, by Mrs. Campbell who also gave each of her retiring officers a gift.

The banquet was followed by games and a social hour.

Committees for the convention were: Mrs. Byda Pump and Mrs. Rosa Lee Prymus, royal chairmen; Mrs. Vera Clark and Mrs. Dorothy Worthen, registration; Mrs. Celeste Baum, Mrs. Minnie Ratje and Mrs. Doris Brownfield, decorations; Mrs. Mildred Haar, publicity; hospitality: Majestic Grandmother Gold Bugs Mrs. Wilma Kile, Mrs. Elena Kearney, Mrs. Anna Mae Knoke; loot sacks, Mrs. Ruth Stanger, Mrs. Margaret Northrop, Mrs. Etha Barnhart and Mrs. Illa Mae Yeater; ways and means, Mrs. Vera Clark; games, Mrs. Virginia Davis, Mrs. Mary Harvey, Mrs. Maysie Hughes and Mrs. Velma Clardy.

The centerpiece for the head table was of red, white and blue flowers and on the other tables red carnations in white containers. White candles were used at intervals down the tables.

The hunt was attended by 41 delegates and a number of other Lady Bugs and Cooties.

Club Notes

BUNCETON — The Vermont Community Club met June 5 for an all day session at the home of Mrs. Laura Belle Floyd. Mrs. Tom Putnam and Miss Wanda Gerhardt attended as guests.

Mrs. Lacy Odneal, president, conducted the business meeting, and Mrs. Walter Gerhardt gave the roll call and minutes.

A contributive luncheon was served at noon.

A report was given on the float and window display for Flag Day and the group decided not to have a float.

Mrs. Riley Edwards and Mrs. John Fairchilds received sunshine pal gifts.

After the meeting, Mrs. Allan Layne and Mrs. Elmer Nelson, along with the club members, feted Miss Wanda Gerhardt with a bridal shower.

BUNCETON — The Baptist Church WMS met June 4 at the church with Mrs. Alma Baughman, Mrs. Glen Stayton and Mrs. Hubert Arnold, hostesses.

Mrs. George Harned, program leader, presented her topic, "Churches Ministering in the Community." Mrs. John Gerhardt presided in the absence of president, Mrs. Riley Edwards.

Mrs. Harned gave the roll call and read the secretary and treasury reports.

A letter of thanks was read from the Children's Home in Bridgeton, and cards were sent to Mrs. Brizendine, Mrs. Hurt and Mrs. Simms.

Mrs. Hudson became a new member.

Pesticide Safety
Pesticide safety begins at the store and continues with storage.

You take the first step toward safety at the store where you buy a pesticide. Don't buy it in a hurry. Take your time and make sure you are getting the right product.

Check the label to find out whether the pest you want to get rid of is listed. Read the directions to be sure you can safely use it in your home.

Check whether the product is a surface spray or a space spray. It's important because a space spray isn't effective on surfaces and a surface spray may be dangerous when used to spray the air. Surface sprays are for crawling insects. The container label usually says "residual" or the directions make it clear that you apply the product to surfaces.

If you intend to spray the air, buy a space spray. The label generally identifies the product as a space spray or a mist. Space sprays are meant to knock down flying insects. They contain less hazardous pesticides than surface sprays, which is why they can be used safely to spray the air.

The main thing to remember when you get home with that newly-purchased pesticide, including mothballs is to put it where the children and the pets cannot reach it.

Check the label to see if it has any special directions about storage. If the product is flammable, for instance, it shouldn't be stored near heat.

Flammable or not, a pesticide shouldn't be stored near food or where it could get mixed up with cleaning supplies, other household items, medicines, or pet feed. That leaves out the kitchen sink, the pantry, and the medicine chest.

Always keep a pesticide in its original container, closed tight and well labeled. If the original label comes off, paste it back on again. If you find a container that has lost its label, don't guess what it contains, dispose of it.

Pressure Canning
Reread the directions that came with your pressure cooker.

Use enough water in canner or cooker to heat and cool jars at a steady rate, and to insure against boiling dry. Water 2 or 3 inches deep is usually enough, although more may be needed for long processing periods.

At the beginning of the heating-up period, leave petcock open or weight gauge off until steam is issuing in a steady stream — about 10 minutes after the first steam appears. This permits air to be expelled and thus insures that pressure obtained will be true steam pressure. Heat the loaded canner rapidly. When the gauge registers the desired number of pounds, adjust heat to keep the needle steady.

When processing time is up, turn off heat or remove canner from range. Let cooker cool until pressure is zero and then wait one minute more. Open petcock slowly to prevent a sudden change of pressure that might cause liquid to be lost from jars.

When steam stops flowing from the vent, loosen the cover. Loosening it before the steam stops flowing can cause damage to jars and injury to you. If you failed to open the petcock it might be impossible to take off the cover because of the vacuum which forms in the utensil after pressure reaches zero.

Equipment Care
Wash pressure cooker or canner thoroughly after each use, but don't put cover in water because doing so will damage a dial gauge and may cause vents to be clogged.

Clean the openings in the cover by drawing a string or pipe cleaner through.

Be sure that all grease is washed from the gasket. Take off removable petcocks and safety valves, wash and dry thoroughly; occasionally soak these parts in vinegar, wash and dry. Clean the ball and socket into which it fits with silver polish. Put all parts back together carefully and correctly.

Watch for steam leaks. If steam escapes around the cover, examine the sealing edges of the utensil and cover — if they are not smooth, clean them with fine cleansing powder. If the gasket is reversible, turning it over may improve the seal. A gasket that is worn, stretched, or hardened should be replaced with a new one. Have a dial gauge checked for accuracy. This can be done at the University Extension Center.

Be careful not to nick or chip sealing edges of pressure utensils.

Store a canner carefully. Make sure that it is clean and dry before you put it away at the end of the season. Coat threads of thumb screws with a thin film of petroleum jelly or salt-free cooking oil to prevent rust. Crumple newspaper inside the kettle to absorb moisture and odors. Wrap cover in paper and place it on the kettle.

Summer a Good Time To Stay in 'Practice'

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're at loose ends about what to do this summer, why not spend at least part of the time practicing up on your double talk?

Double talk, of course, is the polite conversational art of saying one thing while thinking another. It keeps you mentally healthy and at the same time socially safe.

The more skilled a person becomes at double talk the greater are his chances to marry the mate of his choice, achieve prestige, influence people and become wealthy. It can also be a big help in borrowing or inheriting money.

For the beginner, here are a few typical examples of double talk—followed by a translation of their probable real meaning.

"I can get it for you wholesale." — My brother-in-law owns the store, and I get a 10 per cent rakeoff for any trade I bring him.

"No, Ronald, I don't think your whiskers feel too rough tonight." — What does this guy shave with anyway, a Boy Scout ax?

"Would you mind looking up the spelling of it in your dictionary, Mabel?" — I never can remember which letter follows which in the alphabet.

"Our son is staying out of college for a year until he decides what he really wants to do with his life." — He flunked three subjects and was suspended.

"... and this cozy little apartment we like to call our junior executive suite." — But only a midget could be happy in it.

"I can't tell you how much fun we had watching those movies you and Belle took on your last trip to Europe, Henry." — The next time you invite us over for an evening remind us to bring along blindfolds.

"No, don't tell me... just a moment now and I'll have it... you must be John." — Or Jack or Jim or Jeremiah or Charley—who really cares?

"Well, I'll say one thing Bosworth, you certainly were the life of the party." — But if you were trying to get attention, why didn't you simply drop dead?

"Actually, I prefer a dimly lit restaurant such as this—it makes me feel more romantic." — And besides, big boy, it keeps you from seeing my wrinkles.

"That diet you're on really is slimming you down, Hazel!" — I guess it also helps to wear a girdle so tight you can hardly breathe in it.

"Well, I don't agree with everything you had to say, but your viewpoint certainly is stimulating and refreshing." — It certainly is a long time between drinks in this house.

"Handsome is as handsome does, Joe. No, I wouldn't say you were exactly handsome, but you do have an unforgettable face." — Think of it, haunting your mother all these years!

"Why don't we just let bygones be bygones?" — I can always get even with you later, chum.

Get the idea?

Crossroads Comment...

There is freshness about the pale green lettuce leaves in Sedalia gardens. Early they attract birds who nibble the edges, but not devastatingly. The lettuce is coming along fine but not nearly enough in quantity when one begins to foresee this garden product mixed with mayonnaise, bacon, vinegar, etc., or whatever the ladies do to make salads delectable.

Sharing the rows of lettuce are radishes. Personally I think entire rows should have been used for lettuce. Radishes prosper more abundantly than most other garden products. The birds have nothing to do with them, even the bugs and worms shy away. So they grow up like weeds.

Why a human invites heartburn by eating them, I do not know.

Radishes are of all sizes — fat, round ones, long ones, white ones, red ones. I am told there is a black radish although I have never seen this variety. Black should be a suitable color for all radishes. Their edibility does not impress me.

The after-taste of a radish belch is nauseating.

Discuss Possibility of a War

—Martin Luther King's Tapped Wires—

On May 24, 1968, Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson reported categorically that the FBI had been tapping Dr. Martin Luther King's telephone wires and gave considerable detail on why, together with some of the conversations the FBI had overheard.

There was considerable public reaction, and some of it critical. On June 4, the U.S. District Court in Houston made public official summaries of four top secret FBI wire-tap conversations between Dr. King and Cassius Clay, together with an official admission by the Justice Department that the FBI had eavesdropped on King.

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — The possibility of war between the two great giants of Communism — Soviet Russia and Red China — has been raised in a top secret U.S. intelligence report.

The report, purely speculative but nevertheless reinforced with certain facts, suggests that Moscow may stage hit-and-run strikes at China's nuclear laboratories and armament centers in order to eliminate China as a nuclear threat.

This is what Gen. Curtis Lemay proposed when he was chief of staff of the Air Force. It would be paradoxical indeed if a Communist nation now did what a leading U.S. military man once proposed and was turned down by his superiors. However, here are the facts on which the top-secret report bases its speculation:

1. The Russians have raised such a clamor about Chinese border harassment that counterattacks could be portrayed to the world as strictly defensive.

2. The Chinese have so alienated world opinion that they would receive little world sympathy. There would even be applause in the United States.

3. Red Army leaders have argued that Russia should never split its strength between the European border on the West and the Chinese border on the East. Today the Chinese have made this necessary.

The Red Army has now assembled a formidable array of strength along the Chinese border, hitherto not much better fortified than that between Canada and the United States.

This writer has traveled along the border between Siberia and China in the Ussuri and Sungari river regions where recent skirmishing has been taking place. It is a vast, relatively unpopulated area

NINETY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Kite flying is being brought to perfection. Several lighted lanterns took aerial flight last night, suspended to kites. . . . Fort Scott, Kan., wants a paper bag factory. Sedalia should have one by all means. We believe that our city consumption alone would give employment to quite a large factory of this kind.

FORTY YEARS AGO

somewhat like the Dakotas and you can travel for miles without seeing a house or a single living thing.

—Hilarious Skirmishes—

Why two countries should risk war over such a desolate region is hard to understand. Nevertheless, there have been repeated clashes along the 4,500-mile border, though most of them have been propaganda broadsides by loudspeaker, and organized demonstrations of contempt.

Some have even been quite hilarious. Chinese soldiers, for instance, would advance across the ice toward the disputed island in the middle of the Ussuri River, then halt abruptly and stick their tongues out, en masse, at the Soviet border troops. Sometimes they would also drop their trousers and turn their bare bottoms toward the Russians, a Chinese gesture of contempt. The Soviets countered by hastily throwing up portraits of Mao Tse-Tung to receive the full impact of the bottoms-up demonstration.

On other occasions, the Chinese presented a more grizzly spectacle on the river ice for the benefit of the watching Russians. Prisoners would be herded out onto the river and would be accused over the loudspeakers of being Soviet sympathizers. They were then beheaded on the spot in full view of Soviet troops.

One Soviet trick, particularly along the Sinkiang border which runs through wasteland, has been to remove the border markers in the middle of the night and plant them deeper inside China. There have also been clashes between border patrols, and serious fighting has been reported upon occasion. The Russians have also given refuge to nomadic Turkistan tribesmen who herd their flocks on both sides of the Sinkiang border, and have encouraged them to foment trouble on the Chinese side.

Militarily, the Chinese would appear to be no match for the Russians, who not only have lined up missiles aimed across the frontier at China but have constructed 185 airfields within easy reach of the border. The Chinese have only a few primitive missiles which they are testing in Sinkiang. Only one or two Chinese airfields are close enough to the border to be of much use.

—Powerful Troop Strength—

The Chinese have an estimated 550,000 troops along the border and can be expected to muster more. This includes a couple of crack divisions. The Russians have only around 400,000 men manning the border, but they are reported to be superior units.

The Soviets, of course, have superior firepower and, perhaps even more important, far better communications and transportation links. The Chinese would have great difficulty supporting their troops in any major engagement over the disputed island in the Ussuri River. The Russians, in contrast, have turned nearby Khabarovsk into a garrison city. When I was there, many years ago, it was a primitive town of log houses. Troops are easily supplied over the trans-Siberian railway and a highway, not to mention a handy airfield.

There is absolutely no neutral, objective account of the incidents that stirred up the recent Chinese-Russian flap. It was the Russians, however, who trumpeted the affair into an international incident. They gave it a full propaganda blast around the world, unlike their discreet handling of earlier incidents. Most unprecedented of all, however, the Kremlin went to great diplomatic pains to give its version of the trouble to other governments. Soviet ambassadors approached most of the Western governments from Washington to Bonn to Tokyo with detailed explanations of the incidents.

In some cases, these were coupled with subtle warnings that the West couldn't maintain warm relations with both Russia and China at the same time. It is known, for example, that West Germany, France, Canada, Italy and Japan were gently but firmly warned against establishing economic ties with Peking. All these nations have made overtures in recent months toward Communist China.

Ambassador Dobrynin even hinted strongly to the State Department that Soviet-American negotiations to ease tensions around the world would be impaired if the U.S. sought a reconciliation with China.

The analysis generally accepted by our government is that the Kremlin became alarmed over what might have appeared to be a deliberate Western campaign to improve relations with China. Probably this appeared to the Soviets as an attempt to exploit Chinese-Russian hostility and to form a common front against the Soviet Union.

Counteroffensive

Negroes Far in Minority In Colleges, Rebel Unrest

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

Black faces amid the swirling ranks of college protesters sometimes seem so numerous as to suggest they are the dominant element in much campus unrest. The impression is misleading, for their numbers are still relatively small.

In the 80 largely white state universities affiliated with the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, a survey disclosed that on the average less than two of every 100 students and only one of every 100 graduates is a Negro.

The nation's black population today represents 11 per cent of the U.S. grand total, but not one of the 80 surveyed schools has a black enrollment that high. The closest is Wayne State University in Detroit, with a 10 per cent black enrollment.

In the previous school year there were actually more foreign students than American Negroes in U.S. colleges and universities. Furthermore, figures indicate that nearly half the Negroes in the U.S. schools are freshmen. This reflects the great recruitment push of the last year or two.

Negro totals in the colleges are swollen, too, by so-called "high risk" programs under which certain schools undertake to admit a limited proportion of blacks who cannot meet the institutions' regular admission standards.

While these programs have wide approval and are growing in number, they have serious negative aspects which contribute to campus unrest rather than ease it.

John Egerton's survey report on the 100 member schools (including almost a score of once all-Negro schools) in the National Association says of the "high risk" entrants:

"The unpreparedness of these students has frequently been noted in institutional studies and press reports. But the institutions, too, are often unprepared, not only to deal with the so-called 'high risk' students but with black students generally.

" 'High risk' is a two-sided coin. The institutions take a risk on the students, but the reverse is also true, and the risk any black student takes when he enters a white-oriented institution is substantial."

In a recent interview, the scholarly president of a prominent university privately told this reporter that he and many of his fellow presidents see black college students generally as living under "severe psychological strain."

Their fear of whites in predominantly white schools, he said, often borders on the paranoid.

Negro leader Bayard Rustin says this phenomenon results from the "shock of integration." Negro students' call for separate black dormitories, for black studies attended and managed exclusively by blacks, and for other similar separatism is put down by Rustin as a perhaps understandable but nevertheless unwise recoil from shock.

The Egerton report makes plain that black students militantly pressing for a larger and often separatist role in the colleges do not count much on white radical support for their demands.

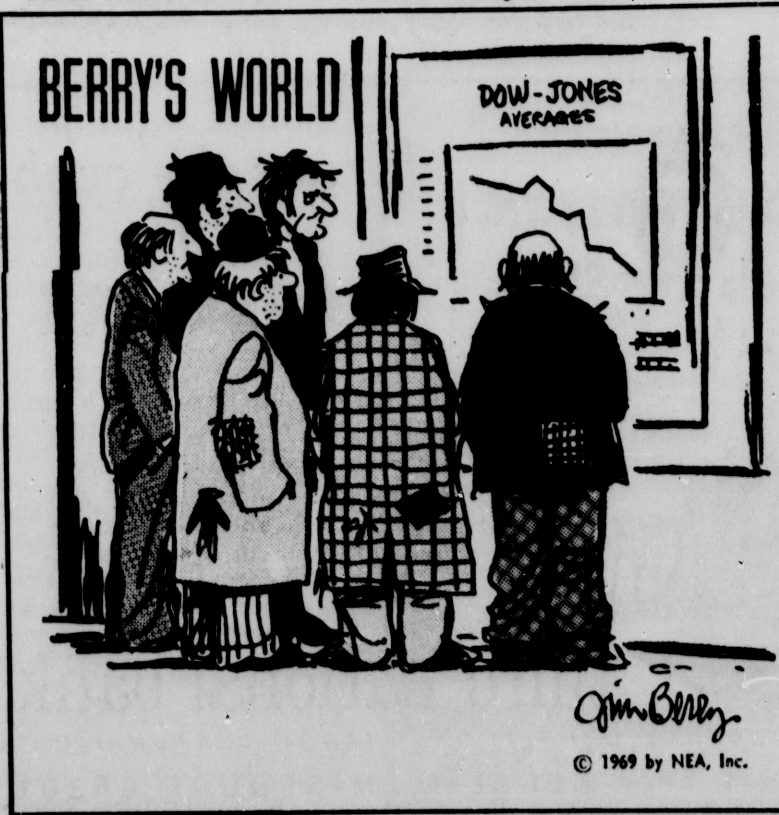

They may not accept the view of President S. I. Hayakawa of San Francisco State College that white radicals see them as "cannon fodder" in a white-managed "revolution." But they are very wary.

The survey report tested black attitudes at five "case-study" universities among the 80 largely white schools. Its summary:

"They (the blacks) said the whites were trying to use the black students as pawns to advance their own interests, or that they had no serious commitment to the elimination of racial inequities."

Moreover, only black extremists talk revolution as white radicals do. Most college blacks shun that course. Says Egerton:

"They do not so much reject the affluent society as they condemn the system which has excluded them from it. . . . Reform rather than revolution is the dominant style, and black Americans are a central catalytic force."

One variation of the loser-on-loser play is the avoidance play. The basic idea of the avoidance play is to keep the dangerous opponent out of the lead.

We don't think much of East's three-club opening. Had he elected to pass, West would have opened with one diamond. The chances are that he would wind up playing a diamond part-score and making four-odd.

However, East did open three clubs. West passed. He must have had previous experience with East's pre-empt. North reopened with a double and South contented himself with a three-heart bid.

West opened the king of diamonds and continued the suit in spite of receiving the deuce from his partner. We can't really blame West for this although a spade shift at trick two would have cooked South's goose.

The third diamond lead gave South a chance to make a successful avoidance play. Instead of ruffing the third diamond he discarded the six of spades.

From this point on there was no way for the defense to take any other trick except the ace of trumps.

Suppose South had carelessly ruffed the third diamond. West would duck the first trump lead, take the second or third. This would make no difference. Then he would shift to a spade.

South would have no way to get to his own hand to draw the remaining trumps. East would gain the lead with the king or queen of spades and would promptly lead a club for his partner to ruff.

Q—What is the largest litter on record for a German shepherd dog?

A—The 17 born to a 2½-year-old German shepherd in November, 1968.

Q—Where did Franklin Delano Roosevelt take his fourth oath of office as president?

A—The south portico of the White House.

Q—In bird symbolism, what do wings indicate?

A—Wings are given to angels, the flying horse Pegasus, many dragons, Mercury and, in the U.S. Air Force, men. In each instance, they indicate mastery of the air.

A Pox on Junk Decor

By BETTY CANARY

This is a clarion call to those women who are as sick as I am of reading articles telling us that for $1.87 we can turn our bedrooms into exact duplicates of Princess Fawzia's. I propose that we band together against those who tell us that redecorating on a budget is "Cinchville." (Nothing less than burning at the stake is good enough for anyone who says ANYTHING is "Cinchville.") Burning at the stake is TOO good for the writer who has the gall to say that all one needs for making an "Eames-type" chair are three stout cardboard boxes and a can of black spray paint.

Solitary confinement is what I recommend for the one who chants, "Hop up into your attic and shop!" You're supposed to go up there and paw through everything until you find what she calls "interesting latter-day chairs and chests that YOU can convert into whimsical conversation pieces." Actually, solitary confinement is probably what she would get if she hopped up into my attic. Chances are she would never find her way back through that stuff.

However, if you can get through your attic, you know you're not going to find the Regency chest and the French Provincial chair and the quaint round candle stand she found in her attic. What you're going to find is the cradle you used for a magazine basket until you realized the rockers would never stay on and even if they would, the sides wouldn't. Except for the cradle, the only things up there with any possibilities at all are the three-drawer cardboard file cabinet (with only two drawers left) and a broken barrel.

Perhaps you are more creative than I and can make a floor lamp out of your husband's old canvas golf bag. I dare you to take on two burned-out electric razors, my Atwater-Kent radio and this bushel basket filled with last year's pussywillows.

A pox on those who suggest that real fulfillment comes when you adorn your rooms with converted spinning wheels and old street lamps from New Orleans. I do like antiques but it unnerves me when I am not quite sure what a thing is going to do.

I have a very good friend whose hobby is converting old objects into new objects and after a visit at her house I am simply not the same for days. The last time I was there I switched on what I thought was a butter churn converted into a floor lamp and discovered it was not only an air conditioner that played "Old Man River" but was wired to turn on a fountain in the front hall. A cigarette lighter was installed at the top of the lamp part and, I'm not sure about this, I think it controlled the garbage disposer in the kitchen.

As for those decorators who say anybody can do wonders with mismatched furniture, well, a visit to my house would be enough for them. I do suggest they bring along that wall-to-wall carpeting, crystal chandeliers, museum-quality accessories and the bowl of lemons they always use when "pulling things together" in their photographs.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Denture Gagging

Not a Real Problem

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: I've had false teeth since 1957 but can't wear them. As soon as I put them in my mouth, I gag. What shall I do? — Mrs. Norma S.

ANSWER: Dentists are guided by specific rules in denture making in order to eliminate gagging, but a true gagger is a problem. Some people are so markedly affected that even the sight of a denture triggers uncontrolled gagging.

So you can see it's difficult to tell you what to do. But I can tell you how ONE case was successfully treated.

Frank K, a professor, 60, needed a full upper denture. "Immediate denture technique" was used: the few remaining upper teeth were extracted and the denture was placed in his mouth immediately after.

Everything went well. Extractions and bone-trimming were quickly, neatly and painlessly done. The denture went into place perfectly and looked great.

But, you know what they say, "...the operation was a success but the patient ..." Professor K succumbed. He gagged till he was blue in the face. He just couldn't tolerate his denture.

He kept insisting that it was too long. With each complaint some of the denture material covering the palate was cut back, but it didn't help.

Do you know what finally helped? Cutting away the entire palate section, making the denture horseshoe shaped.

Usually when this is done dentures won't stay in place because "suction" is lost. In this case it stayed perfectly.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: I need dentures but I gag so easily I'm afraid I won't be able to stand the impressions. — T. Bender.

ANSWER: I'm surprised this old bugaboo about impressions still lives. Except for rare, rare cases, dentists overcome this problem ages ago. Gag areas are temporarily desensitized by "painting" them with topical novocain. When needed, tranquilizers are prescribed to help "relax" patient.

Also of great help are less bulky impression trays, new techniques and new, quick setting, pleasant-tasting impression materials.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

Q — Do you have to report as income insurance compensation for injuries received in an auto accident?

A — No, damages for injuries suffered in an accident are tax free.

Q — I operate my farm on a cash basis. Does this mean I won't have to figure out my inventories for tax purposes?

A — Farmers using the cash method do not have to report the value of their inventories for tax purposes. However, you should keep good records so that income and expenses can be accurately reported.

Drug Store Fountain Extinct

By CATHY BINDERUP
Democrat-Capitol Staff Writer

After 60 years of service, the last remaining old-fashioned drug store fountain in Sedalia has been permanently retired, one of the latest additions to the growing list of passing Americana.

The fountain and booths at the Sedalia Drug Store have bowed to the need for better drug service and enlarged supply space, as well as other economic factors, according to the owners of the drug store.

In 1909, Scotten's Drug Co. (now Sedalia Drug) was established by Ben Scotten and Warren Bard. At that time the store was at the corner of Second and Ohio, where Lockett's Ladies Shop is situated now, next door to the present location. The fountain which was built into the store was said the finest in town, with the newest furniture and equipment of that day. Ollie Praig, who was the druggist along with Ben Scotten, also ran the fountain.

Scotten sold the store in 1920 to Garnett Bulkley and a partner before moving to Nebraska. They were only in the store a few years before they moved to the present location, and named it the Sedalia Drug Co. There, a new fountain was built, which has remained until this year.

The fountain has been run by

Mrs. Sterling Taylor, and Mrs. James L. Hatfield has also been a long-time cook. Another familiar person to those who visited the fountain was Mrs. C.H. Harris, known as "Granny" Harris. Under the guidance of these women, the Sedalia Drug Co. fountain became a pleasant eating spot for those who lunched downtown.

The store is moving across the street on the corner of Second and Ohio, but the old-time fountain won't make the trip. To those who remember it as a place of high school trysts, leisurely ice cream sodas and names carved in pre-formica table tops, its passing has a special kind of sadness.

Priests Sentenced In Spain

BURGOS, Spain (AP) — A Spanish military court has sentenced five Roman Catholic priests to prison terms ranging from 10 to 12 years for Basque separatist activity, authorities announced today.

The sentences were the stiffest penalties meted out to priests in the Franco government's current drive to break up the independence movement in the three Basque provinces of northwest Spain.

Meanwhile in Catalonia, another hotbed of anti-Franco sentiment on the northeast coast of Spain, six priests were in the sixth day of a hunger strike at the Barcelona diocesan seminary in support of the Basque priests.

The Basque priests were tried behind closed doors Wednesday on charges of military rebellion and dispensing subversive propaganda.

They had sought sanctuary in the headquarters of the Bilbao diocese on May 30 and went on a hunger strike to protest the police crackdown on separatists. Three days later the police invaded the building and arrested the priests despite the refusal of Bishop Jose Maria Cirarda to grant them permission to enter.

At least one other priest has been tried for separatist activities in the government's nine-month-old drive. He was ordered jailed for a year and fined $142 on May 5 after he wrote the mayor and councilmen of Amorebieta warning them not to attend services at his church.

At least 40 priests are reported under arrest, and others have gone underground to escape detention.

The Basque fight for independence is centuries old, and priests often have led the fighters. The current separatist movement dates from 1893 and involves numerous factions, governments-in-exile, underground parties and terrorist groups—all seeking some form of Euzkadi, or Basque country. The government launched a drive last August to wipe out the main separatist group, Euzkadit-Azkatuzuna or ETA, after the murder of a regional police chief who had been a longtime foe of ETA.

Hundreds have been jailed. The arrests of priests have raised a thorny issue between the Franco government and the Vatican.

Under the 1953 concordat between Spain and the Vatican, priests are immune from civil authority unless their bishop gives permission for them to be tried. The treaty also guarantees that church buildings will be regarded as sanctuaries except in cases of "urgent necessity." The authorities used this to get around the refusal by the bishop of Bilbao to surrender the five priests.

The Pacific Ocean, which covers one-third of the globe, is so huge that it could swallow the seven continents.

Ann Landers

Act of Bad Taste Out of Ignorance

Dear Ann Landers: I was sitting in a busy airport last week, in the nation's capital. Next to me a young mother (she couldn't have been more than 23 years old) was breast feeding her infant. I know the girl was not a foreigner because I heard her speak to her 3-year-old in perfect English.

She made no effort to cover herself — just sat there in the middle of the airport, with hundreds of people milling around, completely oblivious to the stares she was getting from men and the dirty looks she was getting from the women.

If you say there's nothing wrong with this sort of thing I'll take your word for it, but to my way of thinking, breast feeding a baby in public is the same as being a topless waitress. — Mrs. B.

Dear Mrs.: There's no more similarity between breast feeding a baby in public and being a topless waitress than there is in undressing to take a shower and posing for the center spread of a girlie magazine.

That poor woman is ignorant, not lewd. In our culture it is not considered good taste to breast feed a baby in public, but she didn't know better.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband will be coming home from Vietnam in seven weeks. We weren't getting along when he left, in fact we talked seriously about a divorce. When he left we agreed to wait and see what the separation did to our feelings for one another.

During his absence I have been going with a couple of former boyfriends. I decided not to sneak around, so of course, a great many people have been me, including my in-laws.

These past few weeks I've done some soul-searching and have decided I love my husband more than I thought. Dating others has been a good thing because I now realize that my husband is the best of the lot. I've decided I want to make a go of our marriage and I am willing to work my heart out to achieve this goal.

Question (1): Should I tell my husband I dated in his absence?

Question (2): Did I do wrong? — Learned A Lot

Dear Learned: (1) Yes. And don't waste any time. You can be sure some self-appointed vigilante will feel it is his or her sworn duty, as a true friend, to fill your husband in on your activities.

(2) Probably.

Dear Ann Landers: A relative needs advice. He and his wife didn't get along. They were divorced. He felt the children would be better off if he kept out of the picture after his wife remarried. He left town and stayed away nine years. Two weeks ago he returned to the city and went to see his children. They were very unfriendly. He thinks he made a mistake. How can he win their love? — Seattle

Dear S: A father who reappears after nine years can hardly expect his homecoming to be heralded with blaring trumpets and a carpet of roses. He missed the love boat by several years. Now, unfortunately, the best he can expect is polite tolerance.

Reggie Jackson Leads A's; NL Retirement, Trades

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was a whole new ballgame for the Washington Senators... until Reggie Jackson decided to introduce himself to their No. 1 fan.

President Nixon took himself out to the Senators' game against Oakland Wednesday night and applauded their comeback from a 4-0 early deficit to an extra-inning standoff.

But Jackson, the Athletics' young slugging star, opened the 13th inning with his second homer of the night and the visitors added another run for a 7-5 victory.

"You've got to feel good hitting for the President," said Jackson, who slammed his first homer before Nixon arrived at the park. "He's the biggest man in the world."

"Now, at least he knows my name. He didn't know it before the game, probably."

The Senators' setback gave Nixon an 0-2 season record. He threw out the first ball in the traditional Presidential opener on April 7, then watched Ted Williams' club bow to the New York Yankees 8-4.

While Jackson remembered himself to the President, Boston rookie Joe Lahoud made a strong impression on the Minnesota Twins, slamming three home runs in a 13-5 Red Sox romp.

Elsewhere in the American League, California downed Baltimore 7-5 in 14 innings; the New York Yankees nipped Kansas City 5-4 in 11; Detroit squeezed past Seattle 4-3 in 10 and the Chicago White Sox beat Cleveland 4-3.

President Nixon, in a rare mid-season appearance for a Chief Executive at a ball game, joined his daughter, Julie, and her husband, David Eisenhower, in the third inning at Kennedy Stadium. It was the first time a President had come out to the park after the season opener. David's grandfather, visited Griffith Stadium during his administration.

When Nixon arrived, the A's led 3-0 on Jackson's first inning homer and a bases-loaded throwing error by second baseman Allen in the second. They moved four runs up in the fourth when Bert Campaneris scored on a wild pitch by Barry Moore.

Washington, however, rallied for two runs in the fifth and Allen smacked a seventh-inning homer before driving in the tying run with a single in the ninth. When Ken McMullen crossed the plate, the President leaped to his feet and applauded, then settled back for the overtime struggle.

The deadlock lasted until Jackson poked his 19th homer and Danny Carter doubled home an insurance run, sending the A's within 1½ games of Minnesota's West Division lead.

After the game, Jackson described himself politically as a "Kennedy man," but said he roots for President Nixon as well.

"Man, I took a step out the batter's box and looked at the man," said the 23-year-old Oakland outfielder. "I may never see the President again, and I have a lot of respect for him."

The tough loss, with the President on hand, left Williams shaking his head. "He was really pulling for us," said the Senators' pilot, who campaigned for Nixon in 1968.

Lahoud, batting .083 with no extra base hits and one RBI going into the game at Minnesota, poked a two-run homer down the right field line in the second inning and curled bases-empty shots just inside the foul pole in the fifth and eighth.

Dick Schofield, with three doubles, and George Scott and Reggie Smith, with three singles apiece, teamed with Lahoud to pace the Red Sox' 16-hit assault on loser Dave Boswell and six successors.

Tom Satriano's two-run pinch single in the 14th broke a 5-5 knot at Baltimore as the Angels beat the Orioles and a local curfew, which prohibits an inning

I-70 is 99 Percent Complete

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

ODESSA — John Hughes, general manager of the new I-70 Speedway northeast of Odessa, informed the Democrat-Capital sports department that construction on the new facility is 99 per cent complete. The only thing left to do is pour the asphalt.

Wet weather has prohibited construction crews from laying the surface for the past month.

Hughes said that if the rains stay away for a five to seven day period, the surface can be laid.

Hughes went on to explain in from being started after 11:59 p.m.

Bobby Cox' run-scoring pinch double with two out in the 11th lifted the Yankees past Kansas City. Lou Piniella drilled a two-run, inside-the-park homer and singled home another run for the Royals, giving him seven RBI in his last two starts.

The Tigers spotted Seattle a 3-2 lead on John Kennedy's homer in the top of the 10th, then flattened the Pilots in the bottom half on singles by Al Kaline, Norm Cash and Jim Northrup and Jim Price's double off the left field wall.

The White Sox struck for three unearned runs in the seventh, handed Luis Tiant his eighth loss of the season and won for the fourth time in as many Milwaukee home games.

Errors by Vern Fuller and Tony Horton opened the gates in the seventh before Bobby Knoop and Buddy Bradford stroked run-scoring singles, tying the game 3-3, and pinch hitter Duane Josephson delivered the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly.

detail, why the delay in the surfacing operation.

"Once the track is ready for the asphalt, it has to be completely dry before the surface can be laid. When it rains on the track, it takes a period for three to four days to ready it again. If the track has to be disced, rolled and scraped with road graders before we can even think about putting the asphalt down."

Hughes stressed the importance of a dry surface because water underneath the asphalt will cause it to break up.

Asked when he thought the track would be ready for racing, Hughes hopefully said June 22.

Every opportunity will be given to the drivers in the area to come out and practice on the high banked track, once the facility is completed.

Hughes plans to move his office to the track, when construction is finished. "I will be at the track from 1 p.m. until when the sun goes down," Hughes said, "and the drivers are welcome to come by with their cars, and run practice hot laps."

One of the biggest concerns that Hughes is confronted with is: Will the local and area drivers that have never raced on asphalt try the new surface?

Eddie Gray, a super modified driver from Jefferson City, commented, "My car isn't set up for the asphalt, but as soon as I can get it ready, I want to try the facility."

Gray raced on asphalt for four years when he was driving stockers, but he has never run tried it in a super. His only other encounter with the fast asphalt was in midjet competition.

Although Roy Hibbard and Russell Hibbard were not able to be reached for comment, Carol Schneiders, publicity chairman for Capital Speedway in Jefferson City, commented that from what she had heard, Roy Hibbard was much enthused about the I-70 track.

Russell Hibbard, on the other hand, probably won't attempt the new track she stated, because of the cost factor involved in changing over some parts of the racer due to the asphalt surface. Sparky Carver is the owner of the No. 87 car Hibbard pilots.

Mrs. Schneiders said that from what she had gathered most of the area drivers were willing to try the track, even though most have never been around on asphalt oval.

Hughes told the Democrat-Capital sports department that if the weather holds, the speedway would open the night of June 22 with an IMCA sprint show.

Carey College In Upset Win At St. Joe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Unsung William Carey College of Mississippi upset co-favorite LaVerne, Calif., College 4-1 Wednesday night in the winners' bracket finals of the 13th annual NAIA baseball tournament to move into Friday night's championship game.

In loser's bracket play, Glassboro, N.J., downed Taylor, Ind., 3-2 and St. Cloud, Minn., edged Grand Canyon, Ariz., 5-4 in the double elimination tourney.

Glassboro and St. Cloud meet at 5:30 p.m. CDT today in the first of two loser's bracket games. The victor will take on LaVerne at 8 p.m. for the right to meet William Carey for the championship.

William Carey bunched four singles and a double in the third inning for all its runs off losing pitcher Ben Oshoa. LaVerne's only run came in the fifth when Jack Maloof scored on Bill Smith's single.

Glassboro took advantage of two Taylor errors to score the game-winning run in the ninth inning and eliminate the Indiana school.

St. Cloud tallied three runs in the fifth inning then held off Grand Canyon to oust the Arizona college. Grand Canyon, the other pre-tourney co-favorite, loaded the bases in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth innings but only managed two runs and left 13 men on base.

Injured Recovering

HOUSTON (AP)—What happened? Who did I hit? These were questions asked by Jesus Alou from his Methodist Hospital bed. There to answer the questions was Matty Alou, Jesus' brother.

"You had a collision on the field," answered Matty to the youngest of the three baseball playing brothers from the Dominican Republic.

Jesus Alou, left fielder for the Houston Astros, collided with shortstop Hector Torres as they chased a pop fly Tuesday night in a game between the Astros and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Alou suffered a fracture on the left side of his jaw and a concussion. He was placed on the Astros' disabled list and is expected to be out of action four to six weeks.

Torres suffered a bruised neck and cuts on the forehead. He is due to play again in a week or 10 days.

Matty, outfielder for the Pirates, hurried to the hospital to be with his injured brother as soon as the game ended Tuesday night.

Both Alou and Torres were knocked unconscious by the head banging. They were carried off the field on stretchers.

Jesus could talk to his brother only through clenched teeth because of the fractured jaw but the questioning went on.

"Did he score?" he asked.

"Yes, he did," Matty replied.

"You've got to quit talking."

"Just one more thing," he pleaded. "We won the game, didn't we?"

"Yes," Matty answered. "Houston won the game."

That seemed to satisfy the injured outfielder. He closed his eyes and stopped talking.

The Astros called up two players from their Oklahoma City farm club in the American Association because of the injuries to Alou and Torres. They are shortstop Leon McFadden and outfielder Sandy Valdespino.

John L. Lewis Held Fast to Main Belief for Laborers—'Organize!'

Editors note: Shortly before his 85th birthday, John L. Lewis granted this rare interview to Associated Press Labor Writer Neil Gilbride on condition that it not be published during his lifetime. After his retirement as United Mine Workers president in 1960, Lewis refused all offers to talk for publication or television, and this is a rare account of his views in recent years.

By NEIL GILBRIDE
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The parting advice of John L. Lewis to the nation's labor movement was the same as when he began his legendary career at the dawn of this century: "Organize!"

"There are 30 million white collar workers and 30 million blue collar workers in this country, most of them unorganized. But nobody is doing it," the retired Mine Workers president told this interviewer.

Unions in modern times, he said, spend too much of their time raiding each other for the same members.

Lewis said he feared that if labor didn't revive the organizing fervor of its early days, many of the evils of the past could return—low wages, social unrest, even child labor.

Lewis criticized the AFL-CIO for expelling the giant Teamster Union on corruption charges in 1955, describing the Teamsters as one of the nation's most active unions.

"It is not the business of labor to expel sin, but to organize," growled the white-haired elder statesman of American labor.

But Lewis, who warred with other labor leaders, the coal industry, politicians and the White House during his 40-year career as Mine Workers president, held his peace publicly in latter years.

"He knows his heyday is past and he sees little value in getting into newspaper scraps with other labor leaders," said an aide.

Lewis for the last nine years of his life deliberately stayed out of the limelight, even declining to go to his union's conventions so as not to overshadow his protégé, Mine Workers President W. A. "Tony" Boyle.

The interview took place in the comfortable club-like lounge on the 6th floor of the Mine Workers' solid, old headquarters building near the office where Lewis continued to handle union business almost to the day of his death.

His mood ranged from thoughtful, to emphatic, to humorous. His features still held that bulldog look of strength which for years had scowled from newspaper front pages in his many battles with the government and mine owners. His mind skipped easily from past to present to future and back again, showing no slowing of age. The only other person present was a Mine Workers aide.

Lewis was in a mellow mood, showing he had a mischievous streak and enjoying twitting his questioner.

Lewis rolled the big cigar around in his mouth and peered from under shaggy, snow-white brows with quizzical amusement, wondering, perhaps, what this 36-year-old young pup of a reporter could possibly know about labor.

Would he talk for publication? "Not today," rumbled Lewis, and continued chewing the cigar.

Reporter's next sally: "You've made a lot of labor history and you know where labor has been; where, in your opinion is labor going?"

Lewis:—Chuckles shaking his frame for a long minute—"Young man, that's something all humanity wants to know. It's not just a question of where labor is going, but all of humanity and the world, in the light of the possibility of instant atomic catastrophe."

What did he think about receiving the Freedom Medal at the White House a few days earlier?

His head sunk on his chest and he seemed to take a long, thoughtful look over his half century as one of the nation's most controversial and powerful labor leaders, then he broke into a wry smile.

"So they gave me a medal for doing all those things they fought me for doing all those years," he rumbled.

Did he voice that sentiment at the White House?

His smile widened. "They didn't ask the Freedom Medal recipients to make speeches, but I could have made a speech, couldn't I?" he chuckled.

The Mine Workers at the time had just endorsed President Lyndon B. Johnson for his 1964 White House campaign against Sen. Barry Goldwater, and I asked: "Will you discuss the current political campaign?"

After a long pause, Lewis shook his head, fingering the cigar he had already chewed half its length, but later he got around to talking about labor's role in politics.

Lewis said he thought organized labor, particularly the AFL-CIO, was making a big mistake in throwing its money and support to Johnson or any presidential candidate without getting firm, prior commitments on what the candidate would do for labor.

And he thought labor should be chary of supporting congressional candidates, in view of what he considered antilabor legislation passed by Democratic-controlled congresses.

An aide later explained that Lewis was badly burned over political matters when the Mine Workers gave Franklin D. Roosevelt $500,000 for his presidential campaign in 1936, the union's first sally into national politics. He felt FDR later reneged on many of his promises to the Mine Workers.

But a high union official tells another story about Lewis' bitter break with Roosevelt in 1940.

This source said the late labor leader Philip Murray told him of a visit Lewis and Murray made to the White House on a labor matter.

The official said that after the discussion on the labor matter, Murray reported that Lewis cleared his throat and told Roosevelt:

"Mr. President, I would like a place on the ticket," meaning he wanted to run as Roosevelt's vice presidential running mate against Republican Wendell Willkie.

According to the story, Roosevelt eyed Lewis sarcastically and said, "Oh, you want a place on the ticket, John? Just what place did you have in mind?"

Lewis, the informant said, rose and stalked out, and returned to the fold of the Republican party which he supported most of his life.

Other highlights of the conversation with Lewis:

Q: What about labor's role in abolishing child labor; would you say if it had done nothing else, that would have justified the labor movement's efforts?

A: "I would say that is right. Legally, morally, ethically and in every other way, I would say that is right."

Q: The Mine Workers have had a lot of experience with automation; what is the solution to the displacement of men by machines?

A: Experience with automation? We invented it. Organizing the unorganized is the answer. Management has long used the tactic of persuading the man who comes to work in a white shirt and tie that he is a cut above the laboring man, but the argument is losing its impact to automation.

Q: In view of your opposition to labor's supporting either major party's candidates, do you think a Labor party, such as in Britain, would work in this country?

A: (After one of the long pauses in the conversation, looking ceilingward, squinting, then looking back at his questioner. No. Not now. The United States is unlike those homogenous, small European countries. Labor organization is very weak in some states, while it is strong in the big industrial states, so a labor party is not practical now as an effective, nationwide political force. Maybe someday, that's for the leaders of the future to determine.)

Q: What about the problems of unemployment?

A: I don't believe in training people for jobs that don't exist. The answer is widespread organizing.

Lewis' mind ranged easily over past and present, and he had no trouble remembering some of the smallest details of the past. The reporter mentioned his own grandfather, an emigrant from Ireland had mined coal in Pennsylvania in the early 1900s.

"In 1900?" Lewis said. "Let's see. I can tell you what the wage rate was then." After a pause, he said "The wage rate was 90 cents a day. Let your grandfather's memory never be tarnished."

Then, talking about his own days of working in coal mines, Lewis recalled that Mine Workers never made idle threats in a labor dispute.

"Our men didn't threaten to strike, they just struck," he said a policy often followed by the union today.

He recalled that, if union representatives got nowhere in processing a grievance, the men would strike.

"We would turn our water buckets upside down, or an empty thermos jug, and that meant 'We ain't working today,'" he said.

Stubborn Maid Still Delivered a Ticket

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dave Westley, a city police detective returned to his unmarked police car with a prisoner in custody and found one of the city's "meter maids" writing out a parking ticket.

Despite Westley's explanation that he was on police business and his handcuffed prisoner as evidence, the meter maid gave him the ticket.

McDonnell Hard Hit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp. announced Wednesday 1,800 of its St. Louis employees and 5,400 in Southern California and Florida are affected by cancellation of the Air Force Manned Orbiting Laboratory program.

Board Chairman James S. McDonnell said the company will make every effort to transfer the employees to other jobs within the organization or help them obtain other employment.

Obese Steers

EAST LANSING, Mich (AP) — That fat beef at your supermarket counter is the result of an obese steer, a Michigan State University animal husbandry professor says in a report.

Dr. Terry Greathouse said that, like people, steers get fat either because they are overfed or because they have an inherited tendency toward obesity.

POLLY'S POINTERS

From Nylon Slips To Pillowcases

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I always buy two matching nylon slips at one time. When the straps or tops are worn, I cut off the tops, sew together across the cut ends and have a pair of pillowcases. They wash beautifully, require no ironing, wear like iron and look very expensive.—MRS. M. C. W.

DEAR GIRLS—Pillowcases made from nylon slips also are great for holding the basic lines in your hair-do.—POLLY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—After using and then washing my new embroidered Madeira tablecloth, I find that it puckers in the center that is surrounded by embroidery work. This puckering continues even after additional ironing and attempting to stretch these sections. What can I do to eliminate its unsightly appearance?—BETTY JANE

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Betty how I have pretty cards displayed in my living room. On yard lengths of black velvet or grosgrain ribbon I placed the cards about three inches apart, fastening with just a spot of glue which adheres to both the cloth and the paper of the cards. Put a bit of glue at the top of the ribbon to attach it to the wall. I have several of these lengths hanging in a corner in my room.—MRS. J. L.

DEAR POLLY—Like Liz, we, too, had a messed-up wall along the stairs so my husband bought a railing to put along the wall. He sanded the wood until it was like satin, bought two brass pieces to fasten it to the wall and it really looks nice. Now we have a clean, light aqua wall. Even little children can use this hand rail which is especially nice for older people going up and down stairs and who like, and often need, something to hold on to.—JAYNE

Can Amateur Win Open?

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Can an amateur win the Open? "You better believe it," Bruce Lee Fleisher of Hialeah, Fla., blurted today.

Fleisher, boyish, brash and buoyant, is one of 11 amateurs—and as U.S. titleholder rated the most potent—who will be trying to break the long stranglehold of the pros, starting today, in the 69th U.S. Open Golf championship.

"Why shouldn't an amateur win?" young Fleisher, 20, asked. "They use the same clubs. They play the same courses. Sure, the odds are against it because the pros are more tournament toughened but there are a lot of good amateurs."

"One of them will win someday—maybe even here."

The last of the so-called simon pures to capture the Open was Johnny Goodman in 1933, shortly after the dynasty of the great Bob Jones. Since then, the gap between the tourney pros and the amateurs has widened with the years.

Fleisher is one of the best looking amateurs to come along since Jack Nicklaus.

He is a strapping athlete, 6-foot-4 and 188 pounds with a long, rhythmic swing. He has a pro's attitude.

In the opening round today over the Champions' Cypress Creek course, Bruce is bracketed with South Africa's Gary Player, the pre-tournament favorite, and Lee Trevino, the defending champion.

"I wouldn't be human if I didn't say I am nervous," he said. "Sure, I'm all revved up. But they are two of the nicest guys in the world. I'm not sure whether it will help or hurt me."

Bruce, whose father is a well-to-do businessman with interests in Trinidad and Miami, has been playing golf since he was eight. He was taught by his two older brothers—Leslie, 25, and Jerry, 24. He has a younger sister, Karen, 18.

In winning the amateur title last summer at Columbus, Ohio, Bruce gained a reputation as being the idol of the mod squad. They said he brought sex back to amateur golf.

He wore long sideburns. He played in jeans frayed at the cuffs. He had his own army of followers—giggling girls in mini skirts whom he called the "teeny boppers."

Fleisher hopes to enter the University of Miami next fall, majoring in slow administration.

"I haven't decided on my golf future," he said. "It looks like a glamorous life—on the road all the time, first class, and a lot of admirers. But look at Arnold Palmer over there (pointing to the practice green), he works hard. He suffers when he's off his game."

"I'm not sure I'm geared for that kind of life. I like to play. I like to play with the big boys. But get up at dawn and hit practice shots until you're blue in the face—I'm not sure I'm that dedicated to the game."

Cards Win; KC Stopped, Wednesday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Cardinals, on the hitting of Vada Pinson and Lou Brock, belted the Cincinnati Reds 10-5 Wednesday night, but the Kansas City Royals lost to the New York Yankees 5-4 when pinch hitter Bobby Cox doubled in a run in the 11th inning.

Pinson hit a two-run homer and Joe Torre a solo home run for the Cubs in the first inning.

In the second, a walk and doubles by starting pitcher Mike Torrez and Lou Brock added two more runs.

Hits by Pinson, Curt Flood and Tim McCarver in the fourth pushed the score to 8-3.

Jim "Mudcat" Grant came in for Torrez in the third following Pete Rose's triple, a wild pitch and Bobby Tolan's 11th homer. Grant went the rest of the way scattering seven hits in picking up his first Redbird victory.

In New York, Dave Morehead struck out the first two Yanks in the 11th but walked Jake Gibbs.

Cox, batting for reliever Jack Aker, lined to left center field with Lou Piniella just missing the ball allowing Gibbs to score the winning run.

Piniella's two-run inside-the-park homer sent the Royals ahead 4-2 in the eighth but the Yanks tied it in the ninth on singles by Jerry Kenney and Bobby Murcer, Joe Pepitone's grounder and a single by Jim Little.

The Royals are idle today in preparation for Friday night's home opener against the world champion Detroit Tigers.

Royals Sign Mosely

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals announced Wednesday they have signed A.C. Mosely of Mobile, Ala., their third round pick in the free agent draft last week in New York.

Mosely, a first baseman-outfielder who hit .476 for his high school team, was signed for a modest bonus and will report to Kingsport, Tenn., of the Appalachian League later this month, the club said.

Out At The Plate

San Francisco Giants outfielder Bob Bonds is thrown out at the plate by New York Mets left fielder Cloen Jones in the second at San Francisco Wednesday night. Ron Hunt lined one to the outfield and Bonds tried scoring from second. Mets catcher Gary Gentry backs up play. At left is Giants Willie Mays.

Open Field is Prepared With 150 Pros on the Tee

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — George Archer set out today in quest of the impossible dream, the never accomplished grand slam of professional golf.

"Sure, you think about it," the 6-foot-6 Masters champion said before today's first round in the United States Open Golf Tournament.

"But you don't think about it real serious. You think about it like you think about winning the Irish Sweepstakes, it's nice to dream about you don't expect it to happen."

Only four men have ever won all four of the major titles, the Masters, Open, British Open and PGA—and no one has ever swept them all in a single season.

Archer, a gangling, relaxed man with a curiously high voice and infectious grin, was asked to pick a winner in the field of 150 who are competing for the world's most prestigious title.

"Give me three choices, huh?" he said. "Okay, I'm a hunch player. I'll pick Bert Yancey. That's a hunch. And you've got to go with (Billy) Casper. He's playing some kind of golf. And you can't pass up (Gary) Player. He's playing real good."

"But how do you leave out (Frank) Beard? You can't leave him out. Give me four choices. And (Gene) Littler. You can't leave him off the list."

"Yeah, three choices. Okay. Yancey, Casper, Beard, Player and Littler. That's my three choices."

And how about Archer?

"Forget Archer. That bum can't get off the first tee. He's not playing too good."

Maybe not, but he's made over $66,000 on the tour so far this year and is one of three

Jow Ascue Leaves Bosox; Goes to Kaycee

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Boston Red Sox front office and Manager Rick Williams were to meet today to discuss the fate of their AWOL catcher Joe Ascue.

Ascue left the club without permission Wednesday afternoon and flew to his home in Kansas City after telling Boston officials he wanted to be traded.

"No comment," Williams said when asked if Ascue would be placed on the trading block. "I expected him to be at the game tonight."

Ascue jumped the team four hours before the Red Sox' game against the Minnesota Twins.

A Boston spokesman said Ascue had become moody while sitting on the bench and had demanded to be traded unless he got to play more.

Wills Traded Back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Wills beat out a slow roller to short for a single. Wills stole second."

Succinctly, this described a sportswriter's notes in what may be the beginning of a new era in Los Angeles Dodger history.

Maurice Morning Wills, fleetest Dodger of them all, came home Wednesday in a trade that sent 11-year Dodger veteran Ron Fairly and quick-glove infielder Paul Popovich to the Montreal Expos. The Dodgers also got outfielder Manny Mota.

The Expos, however, turned around and traded Popovich to the Chicago Cubs for outfielder Adolfo Phillips and relief pitcher Jack LaMabe.

Wills, though, is the key man in the swaps, if not in fact then in emotion. He came to the Dodgers 10 years ago from Spokane of the Pacific Coast League. He was an unknown but in his first major league season stole seven bases and marked himself as a thief.

In 1960, he stole 50 bases to lead the National League. Then followed with seasons of 35, 104, 40, 53 and 94 stolen bases. A typical Dodger rally in the Wills era was a walk, Maury's steal of second, a sacrifice and a fly ball for a run.

He helped the Dodgers to pennants in 1959, 1963, 1965 and 1966, mostly as a shortstop, but was traded after the 1966 season to Pittsburgh for Gene Michael and Bob Bailey.

His return to the Dodgers was memorable, if not triumphant. The Dodgers lost 3-0 Wednesday night to Philadelphia as the Phillies broke a nine-game losing streak. But Wills, 36, opened the game with a bouncing infield single and stole second, his 16th theft of the season.

"I'm sure glad it's over," said a relieved Wills after the game. "Now I can relax and get to work. It's been a long, hard day."

In Mota, 31, the Dodgers get an outfielder who was batting .318 in 31 games for the Expos. Fairly and Popovich have seen little action with the Dodgers this year. Fairly, 31, at bat only 64 times, batted .219.

Popovich was never a power hitter, nor a percentage hitter, but was reliable with the bat and excellent with the glove. He made only one error as a utility infielder in 24 games this season. He had 10 hits in 50 trips to the plate.

"Popovich will start at second base as soon as he gets here," said Chicago Manager Leo Durocher. Glenn Beckert, the Cubs' regular second baseman, has been out with a broken finger and Nate Oliver, another former Dodger, has been playing the spot for Chicago.

Wednesday's Fights

Curtis W. Schupbach, son of Mrs. Curtis O. Schupbach, 421 South Park, was among 82 graduates awarded the doctor of medicine degree at the 108th commencement of Washington University on June 9. Dr. Schupbach will intern in medicine at the University of Utah-affiliated Hospitals, Salt Lake City, Utah, beginning July 1. He was a 1961 Smith-Cotton graduate, and received the A.B. degree from the University of Missouri-Columbia in 1965. He also received a C.B. Mosby Company Book Award for high general scholastic standing and research achievement at the Senior Awards Night program at Washington.

Boat Hits Whale, People Hit Water

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Five persons were dumped into the water when an 18-foot outboard motor boat collided with a whale, the Coast Guard reported.

The people were picked up quickly by a nearby cruiser. Ruth Sterling was in a Juneau hospital today recovering from injuries suffered in the Saturday accident near Coghland Island north of here.

The boat—its keel split and some planks damaged—was recovered by the Coast Guard. The whale—size unknown—got away.

A Coast Guard official said he could not recall having heard of a boat and whale colliding. Whales, he said, "usually avoid vessels that are moving."

Traffic Death Rate Shows Reduction

CHICAGO (AP) — The traffic death rate fell slightly during the first four months of 1969 because travel volume moved ahead faster than the number of fatalities, the National Safety Council said today.

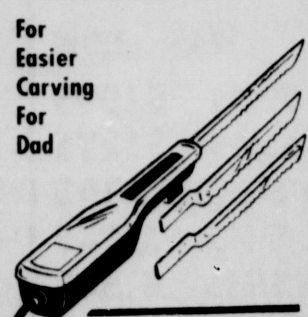

The 16,030 deaths through April 30 was 2 per cent above the total for the corresponding 1968 period. But the total miles traveled in the period exceeded 335 billion, about 5 per cent more than last year.

This cut the death rate to 4.8 deaths for every 100 million miles traveled, the council said. A year ago through April the rate was 4.9.
